SATURDAY APRIL 9, 1910

Good nature and good sense must ever join;
To err is human, to forgive divine.
—Alexander Pope.

That Pearl Harbor appropriation appears to have slid off into clear water again.

Investors looking for bedrock propositions can find them any day in Honolulu. Those anxious to put their money in wind should go elsewhere.

Incidents of Roosevelt's stay in Rome are impressive reminders to many Americans that Europeans have still a great deal to learn about our point of view.

Five hundred dollars for contempt of court is another way for the judge to tell the Jager Trust that if it does such a thing again he will slap it on the wrist.

Holy rollers and promoters of sectarian strife are entitled to a place with Russian trouble-makers and strike agitators—a permanent position anywhere beyond the three mile limit.

Honolulu ought to stand well in the news dispatches of the world when it is entertaining Manager Stone of the Associated Press, C. H. Editor Chapin of the New York World and Foulney Bigelow.

United States Consul Baker's Tasmanna reports that six Tasmanna hens have laid a total of 82 eggs in seven months. He should be promoted as a reward for having provided an answer to the question "Why is a hen?"

What on earth does the Delegate think can be gained by setting the business men of the Pacific Coast fighting among themselves over Hawaii? Today they are unanimously behind anything the Territory wants that is for the general welfare of the country.

French clericals are hard up for something to criticize when they take up Roosevelt's attention to the Free Masons of Rome. Being one himself, he could hardly be expected to be other than especially cordial to all members of the order found in every country and every clime.

It is to be hoped that Delegate Kuhio was misquoted by the cable interpreters when he sent that cablegram urging Honolulu to boycott San Francisco. In about fifteen minutes after such a fight had begun, Honolulu would discover that it had tackled the most foolish and disastrous proposition ever known in these waters.

Kohala's Civic League, after holding a meeting to discuss a sanitation campaign for the district, adjourned until the plantation managers had decided what to do. When the league gets more accustomed to practical methods, it will not take the trouble to meet until the plantation managers have given out word of what can be done.

EXAMPLE FOR MANCHURIA PASSENGERS

Through passengers traveling on the steamship Manchuria may find in the incident of quarantining their ship one of the particular benefits the mainland reaps from this outpost of the Pacific.

Much is made in Honolulu's importance as a naval outpost and a base in event of war, but its value is far greater as a guardian of the health of the mainland against the diseases of the Orient.

A twenty-four-hour stay in this port allows a complete fumigation of the ship in event of any serious disease breaking out among the passengers or crew. The quarantine service is specially equipped for efficient and prompt care of the sick and proper treatment and protection of the healthy on board the ship.

Whereas in former days, or without the inspection at this crossroads of the Pacific, the passengers would have to undergo a disagreeable quarantine at San Francisco, they will now leave this port in a thoroughly cleansed ship and by given immediate pratique at their destination. The danger of further spread of the disease on board the ship will be eliminated and they go on their way rejoicing.

Honolulu in its capacity as a crossroads station does a great and certainly more frequent service for the country in times of peace than in war. It is the haven where the emergencies of commerce and travel are dealt with. Its value to the country as a protective health barrier may be estimated, without exaggeration, in billions of dollars.

OPPORTUNITY IN AGRICULTURE

Young men of Hawaii should not whine for an opportunity to develop their abilities in other lines than agriculture. If they take the advice of J. J. Hill, the great railroad builder and business organizer.

Mr. Hill, speaking recently of the high price of living, stated that the solution of these present difficulties, that are world-wide, is to increase the productivity of the farms. "Agriculturally speaking," says Mr. Hill, "the world is not over populated. We must scatter the unproductive population of the cities to the farms, and when we get them there we must teach them new methods of farming. Our present methods are so loose and slipshod that we do not get half the good out of our tillable land."

Mr. Hill unquestionably proclaims a truth. And the suggestion to in that great successes are to be scored by intelligent young men here should be in the future for the educated farmer who knows how to get full value from the soil and is not afraid to work.

This Territory is one of the few sections of the world where every enterprise has as its basis intelligent agricultural activities. There will be no falling off in the demand for our present products of the soil, nor any reduction in the variety that may be cultivated profitably. World's prices will rise and fall, but the men who win are those able to make the soil do its best.

Though we have no mines and are outside the region of manufacturing centers, there is not a section of the world where the young men will have a better opportunity to gain great success through applying scientific education to practical agriculture.

It is high time that the young and the old of Hawaii got away from the idea that work in the soil is only for coolies, and the only field for the citizen is to boss the job. If they run along on this theory, it will be but a short time before the coolie will be bossing the job and reaping all the profits.

Friends of the late L. P. Tenney are legion and scattered all over the world. There was a man who refused to allow age to dim his ambition to do something for his town and his fellow-citizens. Young men who complain that they never had a chance might amount to something if they showed a fraction of the energy and spirit that was always in evidence with "Old Man Tenney," after he had passed the limit where a man is entitled to sit down and fold his hands.

obtrudes itself into every book you read. Ah, this is a glorious world for lawyers!

There is a caustic bell in the very air you breathe; the lightning above is charged with cause; the waters beneath are washing up proofs; the geese in the pond, the turkeys at large, those innocent children, that hanging piano, the open trap door, the hanging icicle, the cable car, the railroad, the tenement house, the patient, the doctor, the man in the morgue, the poor leper, the graveyard, the mine, and (who would think it?) the ardent love-letter—all, a Pandora box full to the brim with work and fees for the lawyer!

The value of a vacation lies in the transformation it allows and induces. It changes your heart, it converts you. It places you once more in the right relation towards men and things. In this sense, we should all be born again once in a while, at least, once a year.

I doubt if the worst man is ever bad on a vacation trip.

An occasional vacation is a necessity, and the man who deludes himself into the belief that he cannot spare the time for such recuperation, will not prove equal to his tasks. He will be deficient somewhere, either in energy, enthusiasm, patience, or in good will towards men.

For the despicable local spies which grown-up men and women will cherish, I would advise a solitary week on the top of a mountain. Let the party of the first part who has a grievance, liberate it some 1000 feet above anything animal or vegetable, when it will quickly pass into thin air; then let the party of the second part come along, and you will find that he has left his grievance a long way down the side of the mountain. It was too heavy to carry up. And both parties to the feud will talk about the view up there near God, and come down the mountain-side together.

A little more thought under the left horn of the moon, will convince anyone that the reason we have so little charity for our neighbor's par-peculiar fault is, because we happen to be strong where he is weak; and the reason he has so little patience with us is, because he is weak where we are strong.

If we but balance accounts we shall find perhaps that the credits are on our neighbor's side.

Now all these things which surround a man—sky, earth, sun, air, prospect, pressure, rainfall, moonlight, shadow, trees, rocks, flowers, affect and influence him almost as much as his friends and neighbors do, and make it possible for him to be very happy or very miserable in their midst.

We all possess a genuine love for beautiful things, especially natural scenery, and it is only a few of us who have the good sense not to let the instinct make fools of us. If we conquer an impulsive desire to be nothing but poets or artists, we may find that we are capable of doing tolerably good work at blacksmithing or doctoring.
